WILD INDIAN (2021) DIRECTED BY LYLE MITCHELL CORBINE JR.

In honor of Indigenous Peoples' Month, this collection brings together films and TV shows that center Indigenous communities, histories, and cultures. From gripping documentaries to richly told narrative features, these titles celebrate the traditions, resilience, and living contributions of Native American and Alaska Native communities. This collection invites patrons to engage with perspectives that deserve a permanent place on our screens.

Programming Ideas

- Host a screening of a title from the collection that centers Indigenous perspectives, followed by a group discussion. Filter the collection by Public Performance Rights to select a film eligible for public screening.
- Create an in-library display that pairs films from the collection with books and other educational resources.
- Encourage patrons to learn about the Indigenous history of the places they live, including the original stewards of the land and the Indigenous communities who continue to live there today.
