"As organizations that typically have less than ideal levels of resources to carry out their work, libraries naturally should assemble the best possible tools to enable them to operate as intelligently and efficiently as possible."

Breeding, Marshall. (2014). Data-Driven Libraries. Computers in Libraries 34 (7), 23-26.

"The two major areas on which libraries spend their budgets are people and collections. To stretch these budgets, libraries can benefit from evidence-based methodologies that factor in a variety of data sources."

Breeding, Marshall. (2014). Data-Driven Libraries. Computers in Libraries 34 (7), 23-26.
